The OhioKAN program model core components are the essential program elements, functions, and associated activities. The core components are the features that describe an effective OhioKAN program and highlight the key fidelity requirements necessary to produce the desired outcomes for Kinship and Adoptive Families.

Target Population

- Both formal and informal kinship caregivers and adoptive parents inclusive of public or private and domestic or international adoptions.

Voluntary Program

- Available to families as many times as they need until the child reaches adulthood
- Dosage and intensity determined in partnership with families based on their needs and desires

Theory of change and programmatic activities to address both family level and community level impact

- Local staff leadership and administrative roles to support community and system level capacity building
- Coaching to support navigation staff in providing direct services to families

Meaningful partnerships with community representatives with an emphasis on individuals with lived experience and direct practice experts

- Multiple formal opportunities for individuals with lived experience and direct practice experts to inform and engage in decision-making about program implementation and community capacity building efforts
- Formalized councils with local community representatives to build community capacity and foster awareness of best practices in serving kinship and adoptive families
- Intentional engagement with lived experience members who are diverse and representative of the community, including families of color, LGBTQ+ families, and people with disabilities

Partnerships with public agencies and community organizations

- Relationships with local child protective service agencies that are designed to support system involved families reduce entry or re-entry into the formal child-welfare system
- Partnerships with local service providers, community-based organizations, and community stakeholders to facilitate access to services, build community capacity, and prevent duplication of services
- Formalized councils with representatives from diverse multi-disciplinary child and family serving organizations serving diverse communities
- Intentional feedback loops with partnering sites, public agencies and programs, and local child and family serving organizations to ensure program implementation is responsive to the unique needs of kinship and adoptive families in the local context

Tri-level Continuum of Services

Included in the core components is the tri-level continuum of services provided to families. At the Inform Service Level families can access the public website with resources, events and content curated for kinship and adoptive families. The Connect Service Level includes navigation and family referral to programs and services. The Collaborate Service Level is individual advocacy for families seeking more engagement and support. Services are additive, so families receiving Collaborate Service Levels also receive all the services at the Inform and Connect Service Levels.

Staff are trained in and apply the following practices at the Connect and Collaborate Service Levels:

- Use of motivational interviewing best practices
- Strengths-based approach
- Trauma-responsive engagement skills
- Grounded in principles of inclusion, diversity, equity, and access
- Culturally responsive and identity-affirming engagement

This work is supported by intentional partnerships with entities administering state benefits programs. In-person services available to facilitate access

Core Implementation Supports

Included in the core components are the core implementation supports deemed essential for successful implementation of the OhioKAN program model.

Commitment to continuous quality improvement

- Promotion of a culture of learning and engagement of staff in making programmatic and practice improvements to achieve outcomes for kinship and adoptive families
- Regular review of inclusion, diversity, equity, and access
- Disaggregation of data by key demographic characteristics to assess and ensure inclusion, diversity, equity, and access

Comprehensive community service and support mapping

- Service and support mapping generates a list of resources to refer OhioKAN families to
- Assessment of the existing service array and ongoing identification of service gaps

Localized community outreach and capacity building activities

- Outreach efforts focused on reducing stigma around support seeking behaviors and normalizing a variety of family constellations
- Convening multidisciplinary stakeholders to build awareness and knowledge within communities and across disciplines about the unique strengths, challenges, and needs of kinship and adoptive families and best practices for serving them
